Fresno County Public Library and Save Mart Center Book Drive

The Fresno County Public Library (FCPL) and the Save Mart Center are partnering to get books into the hands of children and help families save on entertainment costs.

Beginning December 1 and ending on December 15, 2018, the Fresno County Public Library will accept new and gently used books at all locations. Everyone who donates a book will receive a voucher good for $10 off a ticket to the Harlem Globetrotters game at the Save Mart Center on Friday, January 12, 2018. The donated books will then be given to children through various programs.

There is no limit as to what kinds of books and how many can be donated for vouchers, and the Library is always in need of children's books. The Library is looking for books that are gently used or new as it will be given to a child to keep. Any kind of donated book is accepted gladly.

"It's an honor to work with organizations like the Save Mart Center and the Harlem Globetrotters to promote literacy for our children and get books into their hands. I can't thank these two organizations enough for their hard work and generosity in supporting the Library," said County Librarian Kelley Landano.
